Beetham's Corn & Bunion Plaster

It is a THIN PLASTER, and TAKES UP NO ROOM IN THE BOOT.

It is especially suited for REDUCING ENLARGED TOE JOINTS, which spoil the symmetry of otherwise beautiful feet. THOUSANDS HAVE BEEN CURED, some of whom have suffered for FIFTY YEARS, without being able to get relief from any remedy.

It acts like magic in relieving all Pain and Throbbing, and soon cures the most obstinate Corns & Bunions.

A trial of a box is earnestly solicited as immediate relief is sure.

Is the BEST REMEDY ever discovered.

STARTLING OFFER!!!

A startling offer is contained in this announcement. No such offer to do for you what has never before been attempted by any one—to PUT MONEY IN YOUR POCKET. It is other people's money we talk about, much more than we can possibly mention here, but we think enough to make us think it worth your while to take a short look at this page. If you do this you will find that this announcement is SPECIALLY WORTH YOUR ATTENTION whether you need any or not. It is very much that a manufacturer spending a thousand articles can do so at a far lower price than a jeweller, who sells only one in the same time. That is exactly our position, fully evidenced by H. Samuel's large patronage. BOOK OF GUIDANCE embellished with over 1,000 illustrations, a profusion of illustration of H. Samuel's marvellous manufactures that are supplied in thousands, as fast as they can be produced, to all parts of the world. We have moreover arranged a £2,000 REWARD Presentation of valuable and useful Gifts, Free Prize for each order when sets recently after reading this. As an example, SEND YOUR NAME AND ADDRESS to H. SAMUEL, Manufacturer, along with P.O.O. for 2/6 and H. Samuel will immediately send, safe and direct to your door, his celebrated "Acme" Sterling Silver Watch, for lady or gentleman. Splendid plain stem watch, stout and substantial, lady's size engraved and with dial tinted or plain as preferred. Worth 5 guineas. This wonderful watch is fully described in H. Samuel's Catalogue, with over 50 other specialities in watches, 7s. to £25. Gold and Silver Jewellery at marvellously reduced prices. Also see particulars of ROBERTS' BROOCHES, BANGLES, SCARFPINS, &c. each; and thousands of VALUABLE PRIZES. Also full particulars of H. Samuel's GRAND FREE REWARD PRIZE Distribution. This is a LIBERAL OFFER, and is one of many given by H. Samuel, who has been established at 91 & 93, Market Place, Bradford, for 25 years. GRUETS, TEAPOTS, KNIVES, FORKS, SPOONS, CLOCKS, &c., are also given away. Money returned if dissatisfied. Address and P.O.O. to H. SAMUEL, Wholesale and Retail Watch Manufacturer, 91 and 93, Market St., Bradford.

EADE'S GOUT & RHEUMATIC PILLS

IN A FEW HOURS THEY GAVE ME RELIEF.

EADE'S PILLS. "West Street, Firecrove, Rochdale, 7th December last, 1888.
EADE'S PILLS. "Dear Sir,—I have had the Gout off in spite of the numerous linitments and pills I bought. At length my brother advised me to try your pills, so I sent for a small bottle, 1s. 1½d., and am pleased to say nothing over did me so much good.
IN A FEW HOURS THEY GAVE ME RELIEF, and in four days I could wear my boot and go to business. The second bottle made me all right, nor has the pain since returned. I will never be without your pills, and shall recommend them to all I know.—Yours truly,

A TRAGIC MYSTERY.

JULIAN HAWTHORNE.

CHAPTER VII.

INSANE?

If the inspector was resolute, the Shambling Man, also, did not lack perseverance, in his way. He had the scent of a sleuth-hound; and his pride was stimulated to prove that his theory of the facts was the correct one.

At the same time, he fully recognised the seriousness of the obstacles in his path. Sagacity and judgment can do much, but there is a point beyond which they can be of little service; and that point would soon be reached in the present case. The chapter of accidents was likely to afford quite as much assistance as the most careful logical deductions. The hypothesis that the silver cigarette case had not been taken by thieves, but by persons whose aims and purposes were far higher and wider than those of the most ambitious robbers—this assumption at once cut off the investigator from all the customary sources of information. When a man steals for gain his efforts to dispose of his plunder lay him open to attack on every side; but it is quite another matter when a person of social position and means chooses to become a culprit. The purloiner of the silver cigarette case had got away without leaving any trace of his or her individuality; and it was a hundred to one that he or she would do nothing hereafter to attract suspicion. How, then, was the crime to be brought home to the criminal? Even should the detective happen to meet again the man and woman whom he noticed on the morning of the murder, he had no proof to connect them with the cigarette case. He could not follow them to their home and search there for it. Nor, had that been possible, was it in the least likely that he would find it. The intrinsic value of such an object must be utterly insignificant to wealthy people; or, if there were any special reason for concealing it from destruction, what was easier or more natural than to pass it from hand to hand until its hiding-place became hopelessly inaccessible?

In such circumstances, specific exertion seemed thrown away; one might almost as well walk up and down the streets in the expectation of seeing the cigarette case, with the explanation of its mystery written out on a piece of paper and stuffed inside of it, lying in the gutter, as to search might as well begin in one place as another. Why not start with an investigation of the city's ash-barrels and dumping-grounds?

"I guess I'll drop the cigarette case business for the present," said the Shambling Man to himself, as he shambled disconsolately up Third-avenue, on the morning after his interview with the inspector. "It's easier to find a face than a trinket; and if I can set my eyes on that man or woman again, I'll wager that I will trace out a connection between them and it before I am done with them!"

To accomplish this was the most promising plan seemed to be to visit constantly the various theatres and churches frequented by people of wealth and fashion, and patiently to watch the appearance of the individuals whom he sought. This course, together with a turn in the park during driving-hours, and a stroll down the avenue on Sunday afternoon, might sooner or later to yield fruit. In other words, the Shambling Man must himself act the part of a fashionable man about town. It was a somewhat novel role for him to play, and he smiled sardonically at the prospect. But success was not so problematical as it might appear at a first glance. Although New York numbers considerably more than a million and a half of inhabitants, the arrangement of its streets and avenues, and the habits of its well-to-do classes, render it comparatively much smaller than it seems. Fifth-avenue, and the blocks immediately adjoining it on the east and west, contain the dwellings of nine-tenths of the more prosperous citizens; and their daily round of existence seldom takes them far outside of that limited tract. A week spent in careful and assiduous watching could scarcely fail to bring the seeker and the sought together. In this respect the task was easier than if the person wanted had belonged to the criminal part of the community.

Of course it was only a surmise that they did not belong to it, and in democratic America the difference between the classes of society is, outwardly at least, much less than in Europe. But a trained observer's eye could usually detect the shambling Man, though he had seen the couple he suspected for a few moments only, and under unfavourable conditions, was confident that he had placed them aright; he judged less from the clothes they wore and the fashion of their features than from their bearing and unconscious movements. He was willing to give odds that they were people who had lived easily if not luxuriously all their lives, and that they resided within less than a hundred yards to the left or the right of Fifth-avenue.

He had now reached the corner of Third-avenue and Twenty-third-street, and paused there debating with himself whether to continue in the same direction or to turn toward Madison-square. He had nearly made up his mind to the latter course when he happened to notice a man with whom he was acquainted emerge from a restaurant in the block above, and walk leisurely northward.

"It's Solomon Sibley," he muttered to himself. "I'll have a chat with him."

Solomon Sibley was a pawnbroker with whom the Shambling Man in his official capacity had often had dealings. His reputation for integrity was of the best, and he had more than once given assistance in the tracing of criminals who had left pledges at his shop.

Hastening his steps, the Shambling Man overtook Mr. Sibley just as the latter reached the door of his establishment. "Morning, Sol," he said, laying his hands on his shoulders. "how's trade now-a-days?"

The pawnbroker, whose immense nose seemed to have monopolised the growth that average men distribute over their persons—for he was not above five feet three inches in height—turned with the quickness of a mouse, and recognising his accoster, smiled, shrugged his shoulders, and replied, "middling to dull—nothing more. Upon my word, the people are getting too well off for my business. Before long we shall be brought down to six per cent. rates, and then I think I will sell out and go on Wall-street, eh?" And she little man chuckled.

"When you sell out I'll buy you up," returned the Shambling Man, with a smile. "Wasn't that Mr. Vanderbilt I saw coming out of your shop a moment ago?"

"Upon my word, I'm telling you the truth," asseverated Mr. Sibley, shaking his head and blowing his vast nose on a red silk pocket-handkerchief. "You folks come to me for pure charity and nothing else. Yes, upon my word! Wait till I tell you. There was a man come here a few days ago and he put down a silver tobacco box—"

"A what?" demanded the Shambling Man, sharply.

"A box. Come inside. I catch my death of cold out here," said Mr. Sibley, again having recourse to his handkerchief. He led the way to his inner sanctum, the Shambling Man following him with his heart in his mouth. The pawnbroker placed a hair for his visitor and brought out a box of cigars and a decanter and blackness. "We'll have a little smoke," said he.

"I don't use tobacco," replied the other. "But you were saying—"

"Oh, you have nothing to trouble you," observed Mr. Sibley, pensively, lighting a weed that seemed nearly half as long as his own body. "The anxieties of my business make it necessary I have something to soothe my nerves—eh? Yes, upon my word!" And he enveloped himself in a cloud of smoke.

"A silver tobacco box, did you say?" persisted the visitor. "What's a silver tobacco box? I never heard of such a thing."

"Oh, that box? Well, I call it a tobacco box; I don't know; you could not say a snuffbox, it was too thin for that. It was quite large, and it would be too small. It would be hardly four inches. I don't know."

"Why not a cigarette case, then?" suggested the Shambling Man, in a voice he strove to make sound indifferent.

"A cigarette case?" repeated Mr. Sibley, meditatively. "Well, yes, it might be that; and now I think—it was of Russian make, what they call Niello work; and those Russians, they will always smoke cigarettes. It is a habit—"

"Russian Niello work, was it? A pretty bit of work, I suppose? Engraved, and that? And the other, who was original?" he went on with excitement.

"Oh, yes, it was pretty," replied Mr. Sibley, with professional lack of enthusiasm. "But what fill I tell you? This man only wanted to pop the cigarette case—if you like to call it a cigarette case—I don't know—and he says, 'How much?' So I took it up and I looked at it, and I weigh in my hand—so—and I shrug my shoulders and say, 'Five dollars.' I would have given five and a half or six, you may think?"

"I don't doubt it. Well?"

"Well, he said, 'All right,' like that; he don't care if I said ten dollars. So I take a ticket to write it out; and the pen was so bad I called Isaac and told him to bring me a fresh one. A bad pen is the worst thing in the world."

"Of course it is," said the Shambling Man, with a shiver of nervous suspense.

"So Isaac, he goes off to get the fresh pen. But that reminds me I should have seen him, my friend! He stand first on one foot, then on the other. He take his moustache in his mouth—so—and bite it. He dance up and down as if he was crazy, and at last he unbutton his overcoat, and he take out—" Here Mr. Sibley interrupted himself to inhale and emit another volume of smoke, and to knock the sah off his cigar.

"What did he take out?" demanded the Shambling Man, breathlessly.

"He take out a watch," said Mr. Sibley, impressively. "But ah! my dear friend, that was such a watch! You don't see them like that, not in one year. It is made of the latest style, gold, a chronometer, so large across as two inches, stem-winder, and you make the baum strike by pressing the spring. You buy such a watch for five hundred—six hundred dollars."

"I daresay, but what has that to do with—"

Mr. Sibley waved his hand. "Wait till I tell you, my friend. You must wait for the best. The watch, he was a short figure beside his long nose. "He doesn't pull out that watch—not he, I give you my word. He only say, 'Hurry up, will you? I must be down town by eleven o'clock,' and then he put that watch back in his pocket. Now, I ask you just one question: If that man carry in his pocket a watch for two thousand dollars, what for does he come to me for five dollars on that tobacco box, eh? It is of pure charity, and nothing else. Yes, upon my word."

With that Mr. Sibley leaned back in his chair and took a pull at his cigar with the air of a man who had triumphantly vindicated his position.

The Shambling Man was certainly impressed; though not entirely on the grounds adduced by Mr. Sibley. After a pause he said:

"What sort of a looking man was he? Was he a youngish fellow, rather dressy, with light hair and smooth face?"

"No, no, no! He's nobody you know," replied the pawnbroker, shaking his nose. "That man was fifty years old, and perhaps fifty-five; he have was fifty years old, and perhaps fifty-five; he have a grey beard and black eyebrows all across his face—so. He was a very tall man—taller than me," he added, as if fixing the limits of human altitude.

"Oh, was that the sort?" rejoined the other, who, now that there was no longer any doubt that he had got hold of the right thing, was rapidly recovering his composure and falling back into his habit—almost a second nature with him—of concealing his real purpose and attitude even disguising his real purpose and attitude even when there was no particular necessity for it. When there was no particular necessity for it. "then I must have been thinking of another man. A few days ago, you said? That party. A few days ago, you said? That wouldn't be so far back at Christmas, was it?"

"Not so much—no. But it would be just before New Year's," said Mr. Sibley, fixing his eyes reflectively upon vacancy.

"Ah, I see!" said the Shambling Man. "But it's curious, too. Russian Niello work isn't so common hereabouts. Could you let me have a look at it?"

"With the greatest of pleasure, my dear friend —there is no obligation between you and me. But for you, as you know already; but there is one reason why I cannot show you the silver tobacco box—"

"You can't! Why not?"

"Because it is no longer in my possession."

"What!" cried the Shambling Man, almost springing from his chair. "You don't mean to say that you've sold—what in the name of Moses do you mean?"

"Eh? It seems you are interested then?" observed the little pawnbroker in mild surprise. "If I had known that before—"

"Not at all! nothing of the sort," replied the other, controlling his agitation by a violent effort. "But if it was pawned just before New Year's, why —who took it out again?"

"It was the very same gentleman that pledged it; at least I did not see him myself, but Isaac, my clerk, he received the ticket from him and returned to him the box. Yes, it is curious, but not so curious as for a man with a watch of two thousand dollars to pawn a box of five — eh? No, upon my word?"

"When was that?" inquired the Shambling Man in a faltering tone.

"Isaac!" called Mr. Sibley through the open door leading into the office. Isaac presently made his appearance. "Isaac," said the merchant, "when has it been that the gentleman redeemed the pledge of the silver tobacco box, eh?"

"Half-past eight o'clock last evening," replied Isaac promptly.

"Half-past eight o'clock last evening—that's what I thought," said Mr. Sibley. "Is there anything else you would like to know, my dear friend?"

"What name did the man give?" asked the Shambling Man, more for the sake of concealing his mortification than from any expectation that the answer would throw any light upon the affair.

"Isaac, you hear the gentleman's question," said the pawnbroker with a wave of his hand.

"His name was Mr. Louis Hanier, Vone Hundred and Forty-four Vest Twenty-six-sthreet," said Isaac, as promptly as before.

"Louis Hanier. (One hundred and Forty-four West Twenty-sixth-street," repeated Mr. Sibley again, as if Isaac had spoken in a foreign tongue. "Is there anything else?" he added, turning to his visitor.

"No, that's all," said the latter feebly.

"Isaac," said Mr. Sibley magisterially to his assistant, "that is all; you can go." And Isaac promptly disappeared. "That was a clever boy," remarked his employer with a sigh, when the two were alone; "one of these days he buy the business over my head and turn me into the street. Yes, upon my word!"

The Shambling Man said good-day somewhat abruptly; he wanted to be alone. His brain was in a whirl, and he needed an opportunity to collect himself. The silver box had been within his grasp as it were, and then had slipped out again; the mysterious personage whom he had all along suspected had, contrary to all expectation, pawned the thing, and not satisfied with that had, a few days later, contrary not only to expectation but to probability and reason, redeemed it from pawn. What did this mean?

But this was not all, nor the most extraordinary of all. This incomprehensible criminal, coming red-handed from the slaughter of his victim, had actually had the audacity to appropriate the name of that victim as his own! Was it audacity? or was it profound cunning? or what was it? It seemed very like sheer insanity.

Insanity! The word arrested the Shambling Man's attention. What if the murderer of Louis Hanier were in fact a maniac? Would not that have been a sufficient cause for many inexplicable things? For that matter, what was there that it would not explain? The whole affair from beginning to end had a crazy look. The double visit to the wine shop; the objectless appearance in front of the scene of the crime the next morning; the pledging of the silver box for which the crime was committed; the redeeming of it a few days later; the giving of the name and address of the victim; yes, and the fantastic wrecking of the shop—all these things marked the conduct not of a sane man but of a confirmed and dangerous lunatic. Why had he not thought of this before?

He hurried along the streets without heeding where he was going or whom he met. He felt as if he were in some danger of becoming insane himself. Should he go to Bloomingdale and inquire whether any of the patients had lately escaped? He was almost ready to do this when another perplexity occurred to him. Admitting that the man was a maniac, what about the victim? Was it too much to suppose that she was a maniac too!

TRAGIC DEATH IN A NORFOLK CHURCH.

THE END OF A NOTED AGRICULTURIST.

Mr. John Morion, of West Radham, Norfolk, was assisting to decorate the parish church for the harvest festival on Monday, when he appears to have overreached himself, and fell down on a sponge. Deceased was a well-known breeder of horses and cattle, chairman of the Norfolk Chamber of Agriculture, member of the Norfolk County Council, and had frequently judged at Royal and other agricultural shows in Great Britain and upon the Continent. He was about 60 years of age.

HOUSEHOLD ACCIDENTS.

These are occurring hourly. Either a child is burnt or scalded, or a grown-up person, perhaps bitten by a dog, scratched by puss, or it may be a fall, a strain, or one of the thousand vexatious troubles cropping up in the house, the kitchen, the stable, the hunting field, barracks, on shipboard, the playground, and in the sporting world—from cycle to steeplechase. It is then that HOMOCEA should apply in all cases freely, and in a very short time all pain is allayed and healing begins. Any night baby may be restless

FOOTBALL NOTES.
[BY HALF-BACK.]
A gentleman resident in the Metropolis has forwarded me the following letter, which is a well-known exponent of the Rugby code now in London:—"The Eastern Counties' Football Union broke down rather miserably last season, but the enthusiasm was high, and I was one on retrieving its reputation, and a scheme for a reconstruction of the executive of the Union is now under consideration. I believe that new clubs are being formed in the Ipswich district, it is conclusive of a better prospect than ever of a revival of interest in the Rugby game in East Anglia. A friendly meeting of representatives of all clubs in Essex, Norfolk, and Suffolk was held during the past week to discuss some new scheme of reforming the game of Rugby football, and I sincerely hope that the outcome will be as flattering as the gentleman expects.

The Northern Division trial match of Saturday last, upon the Broom Hill ground, revealed the fact, if indeed, it was ever a secret, that there is some excellent talent in Suffolk and Essex to work upon, but there are very raw when compared with first-class teams, and require considerable training before they will be able to make their mark in the county championship struggle in which they have entered. The practice of playing Rugby is only understood in its barest rudiments, and when the men of East Anglia are pitted, even against the second-class teams of the Midlands, they scarcely themselves all at sea, and a thorough beating ensues. This is not altogether surprising when it is recollected how little opportunity the players have to practice have, and also the fact that frequently men are set to play with partners to whose tactics they were previously utter strangers.

I must apologise to the secretaries of many clubs who have been kind enough to forward their fixtures and list of teams for publication for not being able to insert the same. The pressure upon the space of a weekly paper is frequently severe, and for that reason I have at present been unable to insert the fixtures.

Cowell's 1st XI. require, or did at time of writing, matches for this afternoon upon their own ground, and for November 30th away. The second team also desires a home engagement on January 5th.

Ipswich Town were rather badly beaten in their engagement with the team rejoicing under the borrowed title of "Casuals." The result was not surprising when the composition of the latter is borne in mind. Mr. G. Grierson, who kindly collected the men together at the last moment to prevent the game being abandoned, was on the staff of the Duke of Devonshire, the Duke of Westminster, the Duke of Rutland, the Earl of Rosebery, Earl Cadogan, Earl Spencer, &c., &c. Send for testimonials. Price 2s. and 5s. per bottle. Try it, it may save you pounds.

SUFFOLK FOOTBALL ASSOCIATION.
COUNTY MEETING AT IPSWICH.
A Committee meeting of the Suffolk County Football Association was held at the Station Hotel, Ipswich, on Thursday last, under the presidency of Mr. G. S. Sherrington. A large muster of club delegates included Mr. S. A. Notcutt and Mr. F. C. Peacock (vice-presidents), and Mr. A. Scott (hon. secretary). The first business was a very pleasing one, the county colours being awarded to F. W. Turner (Ipswich Town), Mr. Newstead (Bury), and Mr. A. Scott (Beccles Caxton). On the motion of Mr. W. Kemp (Cowell's), two important alterations in the rules were adopted with but very little opposition, viz., the abolition of the residential qualifying period from 12 to six months and the registration of a player being extended from 14 to 28 days. With regard to the newly-formed Leagues in North and West Suffolk it was found to be illegal to form such institutions without the sanction of the Suffolk and English Associations being first obtained. This had not been done, and it was found necessary to dissolve the present institutions with the object of reforming them when the necessary sanction had been obtained. No other business of importance was transacted. It may be stated that it is at the present intention of the Association to play any county match this season in Ipswich.

THE WEEK'S NEWS.
HOW THE WORLD WAGS
IN EAST ANGLIA.

Items Personal and Impersonal, Pithy and Pertinent.
TOLD BY OUR OWN CORRESPONDENTS.

IMPORTANT TO LADIES.—Mahoney Worth's celebrated Guinea Corsets (black 25s.) may be obtained from her Local Agents, Messrs. Fish and Son, Suffolk House, Ipswich.

ALL SAINTS' CHURCH, IPSWICH.—The harvest services were continued on Sunday, when the offertories were devoted to the Additional Curates Society, which gives a grant to the parish. In the morning the preacher was the vicar (the Rev. J. Sheldon Jones), and in the evening the curate (Rev. J. P. Houll). A sum of £8 13s. was collected.

POOLE'S MYRIORAMA IN IPSWICH.—Poole's Myriorama are ever welcome to an Ipswich audience. To the Public Hall on Monday night Messrs. Poole brought an entirely fresh programme. The views, drawn from the four quarters of the globe, include a series of fine scenic surprises. The most ambitious piece is the representation of the destruction of the Spanish Armada, with its accompanying tumult and alarm of disaster.

SERIOUS STREET ACCIDENT AT IPSWICH.—Mrs. Simpson, a very old lady residing in Rectory Road, met with a serious accident on Monday night under singular circumstances. She was walking along St. Matthew's, when a young man rushed out of one of the passages leading from the main thoro'fare, and accidentally knocked her down. The old lady was very much shaken by the occasion, and found on rising that it was found that she had sustained a fracture of the left arm. Mrs. Simpson was at once removed to the East Suffolk Hospital.

INTERMENTS IN IPSWICH CEMETERY.—Friday: William J. S. Hoard, 39 years, St. Mary Stoke. Saturday: Elizabeth Graystone, 67 years, Holy Trinity; Albert E. Carpenter, 2 years, St. John's. Pulham, 20 years, St. Clement; James Britton, infant, Holy Trinity.

IPSWICH ANGLESEA AT SPROUGHTON.—On Saturday a competition took place between the members of the Workmen's Angling Society, at Sproughton, by permission of Sir Cuthbert Quilter, Bart., M.P., notwithstanding unfavourable weather a few were successful in winning prizes as follows:—1st A. Sherwood, 2nd S. Cook, 3rd W. Bailey, 4th W. Cook, 5th Mr. Beaumont, 6th G. Lyes, 7th G. Bailey, 8th J. Hindle, J. Silcock, T. Baxter. The donors included—Sir Cuthbert Quilter, Bart., M.P., Lord Iveagh, Mr. Cobbold, Mr. Catchpole, the Hon. Douglas Tollemache, Messrs. Ransomes, Sims, & Co., Messrs. Morgan, Sons, and Cornell, Chemists, Tavern Street, Ipswich.

IPSWICH AND DISTRICT TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.—A meeting of this Association was held in the Ipswich British School on Saturday, the vice-president, Mr. J. Shaul, presiding. Motions, dealing with the representation of the Association on the Conference of the National Union, and the formation of District Unions by the combination of the Ipswich and Woodbridge, were voted upon after discussion, in which Miss Broome (Ipswich), Mr. Orchard (Heimingham), Mr. Freeman (Sproughton), Mr. Hall (Caddese), Mr. Cooper, Mr. Senton (Chelmondiston), took part. Strong protests were made against the action of the Education Department in sanctioning Football, and in the case of additional compulsory requirements. Contributions to the programme were made by Miss Mabel Nash, B. Snell, H. Heywood, Nora Morrs, A. L. Broome, May White, Ruth Bland, and Messrs. Moss, J. B. King, W. E. Hindes, J. Hayward, F. Barwell, and S. S. Smith.

IPSWICH VOLUNTEERS' ANNUAL CONTEST.—Members of the Ipswich Detachment of the 3rd Batt. 1st V.R. Suffolk Regiment mustered in strong force on the Greenwich Farm Range, on Saturday, to take part in the annual competition for the Cup. The weather conditions were far from favourable, but this did not prevent 177 Volunteers, 18 more than last year, entering for the principal contest. A higher average was obtained than that attained a year ago was recorded. The ladies' challenge trophy, presented by the ladies of Ipswich, was given for a second time, and under somewhat new conditions, the twelve selected men representing each company firing seven shots each at 200 yards in the "kneeling" position. A good average was reached, A Company winning with a total of 302 points out of 336. The range officers were Lieut.-Col. H. W. Packard and Major and Adjutant Mackenzie; the other officers present during the day were Capt. Read, Capt. Sparrow, Lieut. Packard, and Lieut. Pretty. The general arrangements were under direction of Sergt.-Major Sparkes. Prizewinners:—Sergt. Tye, Sergt. Wateon, Sergt. Plowman, Sergt. Tye, Sergt. Watson, Sergt. Fenner, Colr.-Sergt. J. introduction of a measure for the relief of those who are affected by the existing widespread depression in agriculture, either by means of readjustment of local burdens or otherwise. Mr. EVERETT's answer to that was by voting for the Budget, and so increasing the complaint that is referred to. It is not our business on this occasion to discuss the provisions of the measure one by one. We have already laid bare with startling plainness the gross unfairness of the 1d. and the effect it will have of further embarrassing those on whom the agricultural labourer depends more or less indirectly for his existence. Mr. EVERETT denies that the Budget inflicts any injury on the landed proprietor. Possibly Mr. EVERETT and the papers that support him may, after reflecting on the extract that we again reproduce, and which was penned by Mr. LABOUCHERE, conclude that it is hopeless to attempt obtaining this irreconcilable argument. The extract we refer to was published last week, but political memory is proverbially short, and so complete and concise an answer to the authorities named is too good to be lost sight of. "There are," said Mr. LABOUCHERE, "a vast number of 'squires whose estates are so heavily charged 'with mortgages and settlements that they 'have hardly been able to make two ends 'meet since the fall in the economic value of 'land. The Death Duties will be the last straw 'that will break their backs."

Not the slightest display was made of a spirit of accommodation in treating this question of agricultural depression, a matter so charged with results of the gravest importance. That there was serious need of discussing the subject is shown by the latest reports of the condition of agriculture. The price of wheat has fallen below twenty shillings a quarter, and a few days ago a good sample of Fen wheat was sold at Seaford market for 16s. 6d., and it is stated that some which had sustained damage from the weather had been sold as low as 14s. This is a price which few can ever have expected to see, and it certainly was never dreamt of by COBDEN in his wildest visions. To quote our contemporary, the Daily Telegraph, the price of wheat is now less than a halfpenny a pound, "at which rate 'you can buy land and bath brick." The veriest tyro in agricultural matters does not require to be told that at this rate it is impossible to cultivate wheat in this country and make a profit. It has indeed been calculated that, even if a farmer paid no rent and no taxes, it would positively cost him 6d. an acre to grow wheat at these prices. And it is further said that, owing to the exceptional season, the straw, which would have gone to cover the deficit, is inadequate and partly ungathered. British agriculture is being ruined, if it is not already ruined, and we are relying more and more on foreign sources of supply, thereby endangering our Imperial position. And all the while we are gaining no adequate return for our sacrifices. If we are, what is it? Clearly there is but one problem more important than Disestablishment, Local Veto, or even the Irish Land Laws, to which the energies of the Imperial Parliament are again to be devoted. Yet Mr. EVERETT and the other East Anglian Radical M.P.'s by their votes absolutely declined to set aside time for discussion on this matter, which is of the first consideration to their constituencies. We wish the Radical party joy of their representatives, gentlemen who whose most unmistakable sympathy they neither understand nor appreciate with the claims of those dependent on agriculture; gentlemen who regard the change of the Constitution as of prime importance, and yet do favour us with one solitary vote for remedying the crying evils arising from the present condition of agriculture; gentlemen who would vote down the House of Lords because it interfered with the practical accomplishment of the scheme to rob the farmer, who is already groaning with the weight of the burdens on him, to the benefit of the evicted in Ireland, persons who have flouted law and order; gentlemen, in fact, who are the obedient henchmen of those Irishmen whose present sordid and unpatriotic strife demonstrates afresh that the moral country is the land of unity amongst themselves. Are such politicians likely to be enthusiastic in the cause of social reform in England? We think not, and we do not believe that the electors of East Anglia will again bow the neck to the yoke which Messrs. EVERETT, STEVENSON, ARCH and STERN wish to impose upon it.

IS THIS ANOTHER EXAMPLE OF "SHAMELESS PIRACY?"

As a rule we don't care for washing dirty linen in public, but we would be a very poor, dispirited journalist indeed who would take a flogging meekly, especially such as that which our contemporary, the Suffolk Mercury, sought to administer yesterday morning; and as we are apparently both sailing in the same boat, it is, to say the least, rather amusing that one of the oarsmen should hit the other while pulling an equal stroke with himself. However, to drop metaphor and to get to the point, we candidly admit the "shameless piracy," and that our article on "Cheap Confectionery" was taken from the Umpire (an article which, by the way, was merely recipes from a trade paper lifted into the Umpire, and not "Manchester Gossip"); but, before it appeared in our columns, a Journal reporter spent half a day in verifying the facts with an Ipswich journeyman baker, and if the Editor of the Mercury will come to our offices in Museum Street in person we will gladly furnish the name, "in confidence," of course. Having established the premises, let us proceed to the conclusion. The Anglians and Mercury series of newspapers kindly inform the public where they have obtained their "latest particulars" of the Chinese war from? As the public would like to know, probably, before the lapse of seven days, may we point out the following facts. In the first place, take the London Globe of several evenings this week and compare it with the East Anglians and Stars of the following day, what do we find? An exact reproduction of the Globe's latest particulars from the seat of war, with headings and all complete. Now the East Anglian led people to understand that the news had been specially contributed to their paper, vide, "Central News telegram," "Reuter's Agency," and a host of other news agencies. If this is not suspiciously like flagrant "shameless piracy" we should like to know what is. It is now our turn to call upon the Editor of the East Anglian Times, or the Mercury—as there is only one Editor for the two papers—to give an explanation. If he does not, he must be held guilty of contemptible deceit. Matters have come to a fine pass when Radical political agents attempt to define a "code of honour" among journalists! But perhaps our contemporary would like the public to know a little more of their financial arrangements? If so they only need make the customary application. We sincerely thank the Mercury for the free advertisement they have so generously given us, and as a parting shot for the present we would remind the Editor of that paper of the old adage that "People who live in glass houses should be careful where they throw stones."

TOWN AND COUNTRY.

CHRISTCHURCH PARK CONTROVERSY.

A LOSS TO THE UNIONIST CAUSE.

A ROMANCE OF TO-DAY.

IPSWICH DOCKERS STARVING.

IPSWICH, FRIDAY.

The question of the purchase of Christchurch Park, Ipswich, came up for consideration in the Town Hall, on Wednesday evening, but it is sincerely to be trusted that the opinion of those who spoke on the matter will not be accepted as an indication of the feeling of the town on the subject. In the first place, the promoters of the movement have failed in the majority of cases, the eight dissentients at the Town Council meeting held on August 8th, when they were defeated by 18 votes to eight, and under the circumstances, the action of Lord Londesborough's nominee was not to be wondered at. "Little Ipswich" is very fond of quiet. Considerable capital was made out of the circumstance that two years ago a poll of the town was shown to be unfavourable to the purchase of the Park, but this indication of feeling can hardly be construed into a declaration that the public would not have the land in question as a park on any consideration whatever. The point at issue really was the price of the land, and as this has been reduced now to a comparatively trifling sum, the result is different. Everyone will deplore the opposition that has been raised against the purchasing of such an excellent site, especially bearing in mind that once the property is cut up in lots, the opportunity of establishing a first class public park will be for ever lost. Such a decision would be extremely regrettable. Many alarmist reports are abroad as to the probable cost of maintenance of the Park. To these we would point out that there is no need for any apprehension on that score, and that this should not prove an obstacle to the acquisition of the Park is found in the fact that a large amount of property is bound to be erected on the neighbourhood of the Park, and in this way ask what the rateable values of Ipswich will be augmented by so much that the cost will not be felt by the present inhabitants. Apart from this consideration, it has been computed that the maintenance of the Park will not cost the ratepayers one penny in the £, provided the whole £16,000 is borrowed. Surely no one will grudge such a trifling outlay to secure such a permanent and attractive site. We very much regret to say that Ipswich temperament is still a beautifully wooded park like the one under discussion to be lost for the sake of say one shilling per head per annum.

The Unionist cause in the county of Norfolk has sustained a sudden and severe loss by the death of Mr. John Morton, of West Rudham. Mr. Morton, in addition to his popularity as a sportsman and agriculturist, was a familiar figure at political gatherings in the North Norfolk Division, where his presence was ever welcome, except on occasions addressed by Mr. Jos. ARCH, M.P., to whom he was a constant opponent on the platform. Death, however, makes brothers of us all, and it is only fair to assume that even his bitterest opponents will feel a pang of regret that so worthy a foeman has "crossed the bar."

Mr. Charles Ganz, of whose presentation clock our columns recently gave notice, has been the hero of an exciting adventure. Naturally he has expressed a laudable desire to show "respect" to his relatives, the popular musician started off to town. No cabs being available, he hailed a passing cart, the boy in charge undertaking to convey Mr. Ganz and his clock, which was packed in a box. No sooner had the wheels commenced to rattle over the pavement ere an ominous chime was heard. Without awaiting an explanation, the boy jumped off the cart and shouted "Police!" as he ran, thus giving the impression the chime was omen of some dark deed. Shrilly the youth whistled, but no policeman responded, and in spite of the protestation of our hero (who said the truth will be learnt at the Coroner's inquest), the boy demanded that his fare should "get out of the cart."

But this modern romance was not destined to end here, although, had the author of the tale, he would have had no difficulty in driving off with the cart, clock and all. Still, the youthful Jehu protested, and finally Mr. Ganz was left with no choice but to reluctantly dismount and carry the heavy trophy to its destination. Shortly afterwards he was the hero of some of the cart as we if all was right, and then it was that the secret of the boy's misgivings came out. He had been reading about dynamite scares! Fortunately for Mr. Ganz there was no explosive near; otherwise he might have been arrested for anarchy, and no clock would have been left to tell the tale.

Although it has recently been stated that the East Suffolk Hospital is not in a too flourishing condition, the Board of Management have, we think, cause for gratification in the general hearty support which all sorts of institutions accord the Hospital. The societies all over the county make special appeals in its behalf, Hospital Saturdays and Sundays are annual events in many towns and villages, the majority of the harvest thanksgiving offertories are devoted to the Hospital funds, and the collecting boxes are ever to be found in Ipswich bars for two years past substantially increased the finances of the institution. The ladies' collection possesses to some extent the charm of novelty, but even were such not the case we should retain the present system. The appeals of ladies at street corners, with a fussy-looking little box, and wearing an ambulance badge on the arm? "Only a trifle for the Hospital, please," "Kindly spare a copper for the Hospital, please," "Gentlemen thankfully received," and other kindred invitations to dip one's hand into one's pockets were the salutations which members of the stronger sex received in Ipswich on Tuesday, and the result may be evidenced in the very great, since the Ladies' Committee were enabled to hand over to the Hospital managers the handsome sum of £130 14s. 1½d. The Committee, as well as the ladies collectively, who, in their enthusiasm for the Hospital, undertook a somewhat tedious duty, deserve the warmest thanks of all interested in the Hospital, as the "trifles" which they have now collected for two consecutive years amount to a sum which will afford relief for an amount of suffering greater than can be represented by mere words.

When agriculture is in a depressed state, as unfortunately it is at the present time, every other branch of industry is correspondingly affected. The old saying, the truth has already, we regret to say, made itself felt in Ipswich, where, at the present time, over 100 dock labourers are out of employment and suffering considerable privation. Consequently the Radical Governments are for their neglect of the great industry of agriculture, it is also notorious that during their tenure of office our import and export trade advanced enormously, and within the first two years of the present Administration there was a sum than 126 millions sterling has been lost to this country by that means. Seeing that about 8s. out of every pound of that money is lost to the workers in wages, some idea may be formed as to the loss which the foreign ex-change means to the British workman. And in spite of decreased trade, agricultural losses and the pressure in the country of thousands of honest working men out of employ, the present Government seem to be slow to encourage the trade over shores and eat the bread which is the Englishman's birthright.

A very great commercial advantage has this week been conceded to business men in Ipswich in the shape of telephonic communication between the borough and the city of London. The necessity of a trunk line between Ipswich and the Metropolis was long since realised, and after many years of agitation and solicitation for some time, the result is seen in the trunk line which was opened at the Ipswich Post Office on Monday last—a concession which we anticipate will greatly facilitate business between the two towns. Communication has also been opened with Ipswich between Colchester and Chelmsford. To what extent this local commercial acquisition will be taken advantage of it is yet early to form any definite opinion, but we can only trust that those who have agitated for it will fully justify their action.

In view of the swine fever returns it perplexes the minds of most people to understand why the Board of Agriculture should continue the harsh restrictions regarding the removal, etc., of swine in Suffolk. There were very few outbreaks in the county during last year; indeed, every case of swine fever in Suffolk was traced to a foreign hog. In Norfolk there were 35 outbreaks, in Essex 81, in Cambridgeshire 23. During the first two months of the year 1894 only 66 pigs, and in the last two months eight animals, disease or having been exposed to infection were slaughtered; during the same period 85 died of swine fever. The latter is the one. In the border counties named the numbers were much larger. Surely with the long imposed regulations the disease may be considered as stamped out, for the present at all events, and that the restrictions may be relaxed with impunity.

Suffolk also, last year, was comparatively free from anthrax, whilst North Norfolk and Essex were visited more than once or twice times as many outbreaks respectively, and Norfolk had 14 and Essex 10 as compared with two in Suffolk. Anthrax, unlike many infectious diseases among cattle, is not to be stamped out by slaughter. It does not spread from animal to animal during life—the disease arises after death and burial, and the anthrax bacillus may exist and retain its vitality apart from animal life, intervals of years sometimes occurring between outbreaks, and then on farms widely separated. The origin of the disease is a microscopic fungus, which develops from extremely minute spores.

ARGENTINA NOTES.

EXAMPLE OF HOME RULE.

GRAIN PROSPECTS.

A DEPRESSING OUTLOOK FOR ENGLISH AGRICULTURISTS.

[BY OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.]

BUENOS AYRES, 5th September, 1894

I see, on referring to my last letter, that I promised that if I mean to get through it at all I had better let no more grass grow under my feet, but tackle my work at once. First I am most anxious to impress on your readers both where the Argentine Republic—or Argentina—really is, and the magnitude of the country we are treating. The very best way will be to give a map of South America for them to look at, and look at it attentively as I go on. Probably the map will show a small pink, blue, or yellow patch—very likely a few crimson, dotted here and there—mountains marked on it—and branded Argentine Republic, Buenos Ayres standing out very prominently as the most important city of the whole about it. This Republic, possessing an area of 2,894,257 square kilometres—or an equivalent in the areas of Germany, Austria, Italy, Portugal, Switzerland, Holland, Germany, Austria, Italy, Hungary, and Denmark—all joined in, and Argentina—really is not the north by Republic of Bolivia, Paraguay, and Brazil, on the west and south by Chile, and on the east by Uruguay, a small part of the sea, and fourteen provinces, and nine sections of National Territory, each province

BEING ALMOST A LITTLE STATE

by itself, and each one furnishing a most brilliant example of the glorious mismanagement caused by Home Rule—while the National Territories have been the happy hunting grounds for army and other pensioners who, together with the Indians, have commenced, more or less, considerably into the spare lands hitherto the property of the National Government that, at the present time, Argentina is the very place to go for the often talked of development of their fiscal property. I have been bound to be statistical to certain extent, because it is necessary to enable me to fix in your minds the theatre of action, otherwise the play will lose its value, and we shall be at sea without a chart to steer by, and not know where we are. Besides this, it has been much impressed on me, when I have hat the good fortune to meet a native of the Argentine Republic, the astonishing amount of ignorance you good people display. Buenos Ayres seems to be your idea of the Argentine Republic, and that possibly a small tract of country may exist, with a smaller town in the interior (indefinite term that), and the rest of the country a boundless prairie, peopled by a few Indians and wandering cowboys, who live more or less in a perpetual state of revolution—and what for, none of you can say. I remember for and what for, none of you can say. I remember for myself, when I left Ipswich for Buenos Ayres, I was immensely excited with the idea of setting out to the "Wild and Woolly West," and I anticipated a pleasant time in a land where the Englishman or white man would walk about with a thick stick and

or black man, while the whole district would teem with monkeys, parrots, coconut trees, and other creeping things, much to the advantage of the white man—that is, of his business—from them. Really my ignorance was pardonable, for I am certain the majority of English people are as ignorant as I was of the Argentine Republic (see a leaflet strifes as Argentine loans, Cæsium, &c.) as I was then. About a year ago, when in London, a well-known Englishman said to me (I had ever vowed ever to Monte Video before breakfast. "I must be quite close to where you live, he said, "I have just popped across Paraguay." I told him I once struggled on an oar for half an hour, but had not beaten the record by rowing the inside harbour of Buenos Ayres in a piece of ice as dangerous as the English Channel. This is a fair example of the numerous mistakes you commit when you get hold of Argentine Republic facts. But to return to my story. Buenos Ayres is the city which forms the capital of the whole Republic, and is the seat of

and does not come within the jurisdiction of the province of Buenos Ayres, which it occupies a portion of it. The census of 1887 shows a population of 350,000 inhabitants, which figure has, however, been almost doubled by the census of 1894, and is the place where the North American system, the streets running due south to north, and intercepted at regular intervals by streets going east to west, and every block of houses is 150 metres, or say, 100 yards long either way. The houses are built principally, in the Italian style of architecture, the more recent ones being three, four, or five stories in height, of a more Parisian stamp, whilst numerous villas are dotted about the suburbs, and no appliances are necessary for providing against an Indian tropical heat, because it does not exist. Strange to say, the winter months are the hottest of the year, dress as we do, look as we do, very generally behave better than we do, are well educated and intelligent, and have a very fair knowledge of the rest of the world and the people living in it. The

and level—the city lying only twenty metres above the sea level, while the continual traffic gives a busy air to the surroundings, and the shops are of a character with shops of every description—Libertys' of Regent Street, Hamley's of Regent Street, Lincoln and Bennett, and all your well-known establishments in the European style, with a perpetual rolling by of English and French carriages drawn by the best thoroughbreds, this one knows that the Argentines have a right to call their capital the "Paris of South America." So much in brief letter for the present (as I have fully outlined in our next), and now for passing events. Our gold premium is our feature. I said in my last that 250 per cent. would be the outside limit (as I have

A GREAT SOCIAL PROGRAMME

UNFOLDED AT BRAMFORD.

WHAT OUGHT TO BE DONE FOR THE MASSES.

HOW THE RADICALS NEGLECT THE LABOURER.

A PLEA FOR OLD-AGE PENSIONS.

The village of Bramford boasts a numerous and enthusiastic branch of the Ipswich Mutual Working Men's Independent Federation—a branch which is making rapid progress numerically and financially, and affording a means of help to those of its members who are unfortunate enough to suffer the physical affliction. The members turned up in strong force at a special meeting held at the Angel Hotel, on Monday evening, to hear an address on the many social and labour questions of the day from Mr. H. E. M. Bourke, of Norwich. Mr. Jas. Richards, of Ipswich, the president of the Federation, occupied the chair, and in introducing Mr. Bourke he congratulated the branch on the progress it had made—there being a nucleus of a ship of nearly 100 men. He looked upon the members as embracing the cream of the working men at Bramford. As a Federation he was pleased to state that they were progressing, and during the last year they had added a good number hundreds to their roll of membership in different parts of the country. They had now reached the total of 30,000, one of which had a membership like 50 adherents, while the other had between 400 and 500 members; and the working man of Grimsby had decided to find no more ten thousand a year with which to pay Ben Tillett and the officials of the Dockers' Union. Like those members of Bramford they were going to subscribe and dispense their own funds and who, in the past, has made a happy hunting ground of their pockets. (Applause).

Mr. H. E. M. BOURKE, whose visit had been anticipated with considerable interest, met with a very hearty reception. After expressing his pleasure in visiting the branch, he said the reason he was there was because, after some years of living the life of a working man, he had come to the conclusion that its aims and objects were such as they so working men ought to support. At the present time, under the Labour Representation Committee, a very serious position in this country; in fact he might say in almost every quarter of the world. The social questions were pressing upon every Government, and labour itself had come to the conclusion that it must do something for itself. The Socialist party of the day; therefore no Government of any sort or kind could undertake to govern a country unless it could see its way to take into consideration all the requirements of the labouring classes. In times past the question was not so pressing as at the present time because the cost of living was not so thick, and because we did not then depend so much upon the produce of labour as we do at present. The Government of this day, this as a matter of fact, had crushly put it to him, the working man wanted to see his herring turn into a beefsteak. (Laughter and applause). He was not satisfied to know that a number of allotments had largely increased, that the hours of labour, taking the country throughout, had been reduced, that the wages had been a great improvement in the building of artisans and labourers' cottages, that there was a decrease in the price of tobacco, and that the cost of the labouring population used most, and that the Poor-law was more humanely administered. It was satisfactory, too, that some of the Acts had been improved.

A VERY NARROW CODE

on children's education had been removed, and that some 20,000 to 30,000 London children spent their holidays in the country. That was a gain to the labourer. Satisfactory also were the Factory Acts, providing more space, and care provided in our large towns. It was satisfactory to find that universal position of the Radical party in politics, and before very long that question would be urged on in the hope of obtaining for the working man a fair deal; that the best pictures of the land and the best music was now within the reach of the populace of our large towns, and that cheap trains to the sea-side were not so uncommon. But it was disappointing to reflect how little all these improvements meant when the matter was remained. Little had been done in the average wages to meet the needs of life; how low the standard of health in our centres of industry; how inadequate the provision to meets the wants of public libraries and means of raising and inculcating higher thoughts among the people. There was nothing to encourage one to think that it remained true to say that the average poor died before the average rich; that they suffered unduly from want of sport, and that the most perfect sanitation and that so little had been done to advance the higher education of the masses. Quoting from the report of the

in order to illustrate the force of his remarks, the speaker drew a very gloomy picture of the conditions of labour in the Black Country, and the misery and privation which the people had to endure, and the makers of the Cradley Heath and district, where men, women and children, for a mere pittance, were forced to work in a foul atmosphere, and where, with the exception of drink, there was no variety in their lives. Turning to some of the more imaginary questions of the day, Mr. Bourke dealt with the proceedings at the Norwich Trades Congress, to the debates at which he was an interested listener. He regretted that the whole matter of the Congress was devoted to discussing a Socialistic or Collectivist programme—that it had not been the object of the promoters to bring before the Congress were reasonable measures which he would be willing to support. But to that end they had failed miserably, and the difficulty we had to encounter was not so much the large number of unemployed, as that very large portion that never did a stroke of work, but lived the finest day's work if they had the chance; that portion were loafers, and would remain so. That portion of the unfortunate working class was the class they never heard of, the least of—the very low-paid labourers of Auchland—who were generally found to be the most hard-working and honest portion of the working community. (Applause)

WHAT WAS THE SOCIALIST VIEW?

It was that our whole system was wrong—that there should no longer be individuals employing labour; and that in future every undertaking, manufacture, railway, &c., should be owned by the State at large. By that means they would destroy the individual, as well as ambition towards progress and improvement. The whole profit was made by paid by one dead level, and there would be no inducement to make him strive to gain more than the knowledge of his duty. That was the attitude of the undervaking in which he was engaged. In his (Mr. Bourke's) opinion, we commercially could never under such conditions hope to be beaten in every enterprise and every market, and instead of finding employment for the people, they would be driven to find employment for the people, they would be driven to find employment at a standstill. He believed, and he thought most sensible men would agree with him, that never in the world was there a greater capital and labour or to pull down capital because it was doing well; but rather to bring more work into the country. (Cheers.) He had heard many arguments against Socialism to agriculture, the prosperity of which they all sincerely desired, the speaker said, he had studied for himself if things had not that, say, a small farmer had to throw his farm up? Would the workman be any better because of the ruin of the farmer? (No.) No; but he believed a man would be better if agriculture improved and his master earned a profit by his farm profits, and not by reducing the price, or put off a farm the less chance the labourer had of getting higher wages; and if a farmer was losing money, on making less profit on his farm every year, members of that Federation would not be justified in demanding increased wages and thus increasing their employer's burdens. If the farmer was losing money, and farmers were making good profits, he would say that it would be within their right to approach their employer, and in a fairly behaved manner for their wages to be put up a shilling or so a week. And if he was a reasonable employer he would not refuse an application of that nature; but it would

to go and press for higher wages when the farmer must either place the land under grass or reduce his labour bill. The same law applied to manufacture, for the more money a manufacturer received, the more money the manufacturer received, and the more people he was able to employ. Dealing with the question of sickness, and quoting from the report of the Royal Commission, he said that, say, a small farmer had to throw his farm up? Would the workman be any better because of the ruin of the farmer? (No.) No; but he believed a man would be better if agriculture improved and his master earned a profit by his farm profits, and not by reducing the price, or put off a farm the less chance the labourer had of getting higher wages; and if a farmer was losing money, on making less profits on his farm every year, members of that Federation would not be justified in demanding increased wages and thus increasing their employer's burdens. If the farmer was losing money, and farmers were making good profits, he would say that it would be within their right to approach their employer, and in a fairly behaved manner for their wages to be put up a shilling or so a week. And if he was a reasonable employer he would not refuse an application of that nature; but it would

to go and press for higher wages when the farmer must either place the land under grass or reduce his labour bill. The same law applied to manufacture, for the more money a manufacturer received, the more money the manufacturer received, and the more people he was able to employ. Dealing with the question of sickness, and quoting from the report of the Royal Commission, he said that, say, a workman pointed out the serious effect they had upon trade, and how many a large contract was lost through the workmen being unable to do it. English workman was not prepared to meet his employer on that point, and he thought that was not the worst phase of the question. When once a contract was lost in that way it was not soon recovered. The speaker had in the Norwich Congress that one of the remedies for the present state of affairs was an eight hours day; but angular to say, if they looked at countries where that had been tried to engage those things by other countries that had adopted the system—they found that short hours up to a certain point only were beneficial. As an instance of this the speaker mentioned two large mills, one at Vienna and the other in Switzerland, where formerly 14 and 15 hours a day were respectively worked. Now ten hours a day only were worked and the output had increased. In Switzerland, however, it was found a shortening of the hours of labour; for instance, where the nature of the work was such as to endanger the lives of the public in connection with it, as those employed for a longer period, as in the case of railway signalmen. (Applause.) He would also favour shorter hours in the case of miners, whose risk was great and their work exhaustive, precluded the miners themselves unanimously asked for an eight hours day. In the cotton factories, where great danger prevailed and carelessness created great risk, there also he would be in favour of shortening the hours of labour. But take other trades—even eight hours day would not be beneficial. Take the bricklayers. In summer time they could generally work long hours and in winter time short hours, but when they were bound to work shorter hours and earn less money, and would be fair and just to say to the bricklayer in the winter time, "You should work eight hours and no longer? He (the speaker) contended that a man ought to be allowed to work when he could. The Socialistic principle applied to the low paid labourer to whom he had referred, and he

which seemed to be a hard and harsh measure—being passed for the country at large who—for the workmen employed in the towns—would not be affected to any labourers? Under such a Bill harvestmen would work eight hours only. The farmer had only so much money to spend on his harvest, and the result would be that double the number of men would be employed to get in the crops owing to the reduction of working hours. Within the last few years the wages of the men had increased by 2s. per week. Proceeding he said he was not opposed to all socialistic principles. He was a great supporter of free education, which was one of the greatest socialist measures passed within the last few years. He believed, also, in the better housing of our working people, with better cottages and land around them. He also wanted to see the old age pension question satisfactorily settled. (Cheers). Our soldiers and sailors and Government employed ought to have received pensions in their old age, but England, and rightly so, owed a very great debt to her brave army of workers. (Applause). They it was who had thrown the way in commercial enterprise and progress to every known country of the globe; yet there were still far too many cases of the old, deserving old age, were no longer able to work. To the latter he held we ought to be able to say: "You have worked hard and well for your country, and you deserve a pension to enable you to spend your old age in peace and comfort." But it was only by passing resolutions and persistently asking for that the workers would ever get a burning question which no Government in the future would be able to ignore. Another great social question was the question of the housing of the people. That was to be found a large social problem. (Hear, hear.) A man who for no fault of his own eventually found himself with no work to go, except the workhouse. That was the workhouse. He went there, perhaps without a scratch or a word against his character. He was put in the workhouse with some of whom were rogues, blackguards, and tramps, who had never done a day's work in their lives, and who had no pride, and nothing in common, and wished to have nothing in common. His (Mr. Bourke's) opinion was that a pension should be given to the aged and deserving poor, and forward them to their Parliamentary representatives, asking that honest, hardworking men who met with misfortune in their old age should be treated in their own cottages—(cheers)—while the good-for-nothing tramps, rogues and vagabonds might go to the workhouse, or wherever they liked. (Renewed cheers.) Agriculture, too, was in a deplorable state. There were 30 millions sterling of capital sunk in agriculture, and 30 millions sterling of capital sunk in agriculture, and what were not a day's work was being done, where the farms were standing in ruin, and where the cottages had deserted. (Hear, hear.) It was to be feared a depression spread to Suffolk? A gentleman had told him that day that he had just thrown out of cultivation 50 acres of land, and he could get no tenant, because he could not make it pay. Before that the same gentleman gave up 400 acres of land from the same cause. The speaker then referred to

and no one would have it, and to-day in Essex freehold land could be bought for £27 per acre. But when it was bought what was the use of it when it could not be made to pay? At the same time he knew very well that there were a number of men who were known to be on the point of starvation. Were they, he asked, to go, except to the workhouse, and starve there? (Cries of "No.") If that was the object of the Socialists, they were going to cut their own throats. Who supplied the workhouse, or anything else for soldiers, sailors, or the best specimens of Englishmen to-day? Why, the agricultural labourer. If the Socialists were going to do away with agriculture, it would not be long before the great name of England perished also, because agriculture was the backbone of England. Mr. Bourke, dealing with the question of railway rates, which invariably favoured foreign at the expense of English produce, Mr. Bourke mentioned that in 1894 the Liberal Party per cwt. of apples from Southampton to London was 5s. for the foreigner and 15s. for the Englishman. Strawberries, per ton, foreigner 30s., and 60s. to the English eggs 20s.; foreign hops 6s. 6d., English hops 21s. ("Shame.") Why should we subsidise and aid the foreigner and thwart the Englishman? There were isolated cases of agricultural prosperity, but if they took the average working of the country it had been a great improvement in the building of artisans and labourers' cottages, that there was a decrease in the price of tobacco, and that the Poor-law was a labouring population used most, and that the Poor-law was more humanely administered. It was satisfactory, too, that some of the Acts had been improved.

A VERY NARROW CODE

on children's education had been removed, and that some 20,000 to 30,000 London children spent their holidays in the country. That was a gain to the labourer. Satisfactory also were the Factory Acts, providing more space, and care provided in our large towns. It was satisfactory to find that universal position of the Radical party in politics, and before very long that question would be urged on in the hope of obtaining for the working man a fair deal; that the best pictures of the land and the best music was now within the reach of the populace of our large towns, and that cheap trains to the sea-side were not so uncommon. But it was disappointing to reflect how little all these improvements meant when the matter was remained. Little had been done in the average wages to meet the needs of life; how low the standard of health in our centres of industry; how inadequate the provision to meets the wants of public libraries and means of raising and inculcating higher thoughts among the people. There was nothing to encourage one to think that it remained true to say that the average poor died before the average rich; that they suffered unduly from want of sport, and that the most perfect sanitation and that so little had been done to advance the higher education of the masses. Quoting from the report of the

in order to illustrate the force of his remarks, the speaker drew a very gloomy picture of the conditions of labour in the Black Country, and the misery and privation which the people had to endure, and the makers of the Cradley Heath and district, where men, women and children, for a mere pittance, were forced to work in a foul atmosphere, and where, with the exception of drink, there was no variety in their lives. Turning to some of the more imaginary questions of the day, Mr. Bourke dealt with the proceedings at the Norwich Trades Congress, to the debates at which he was an interested listener. He regretted that the whole matter of the Congress was devoted to discussing a Socialistic or Collectivist programme—that it had not been the object of the promoters to bring before the Congress were reasonable measures which he would be willing to support. But to that end they had failed miserably, and the difficulty we had to encounter was not so much the large number of unemployed, as that very large portion that never did a stroke of work, but lived the finest day's work if they had the chance; that portion were loafers, and would remain so. That portion of the unfortunate working class was the class they never heard of, the least of—the very low-paid labourers of Auchland—who were generally found to be the most hard-working and honest portion of the working community. (Applause)

WHAT WAS THE SOCIALIST VIEW?

It was that our whole system was wrong—that there should no longer be individuals employing labour; and that in future every undertaking, manufacture, railway, &c., should be owned by the State at large. By that means they would destroy the individual, as well as ambition towards progress and improvement. The whole profit was made by paid by one dead level, and there would be no inducement to make him strive to gain more than the knowledge of his duty. That was the attitude of the undervaking in which he was engaged. In his (Mr. Bourke's) opinion, we commercially could never under such conditions hope to be beaten in every enterprise and every market, and instead of finding employment for the people, they would be driven to find employment at a standstill. He believed, and he thought most sensible men would agree with him, that never in the world was there a greater capital and labour or to pull down capital because it was doing well; but rather to bring more work into the country. (Cheers.) He had heard many arguments against Socialism to agriculture, the prosperity of which they all sincerely desired, the speaker said, he had studied for himself if things had not that, say, a small farmer had to throw his farm up? Would the workman be any better because of the ruin of the farmer? (No.) No; but he believed a man would be better if agriculture improved and his master earned a profit by his farm profits, and not by reducing the price, or put off a farm the less chance the labourer had of getting higher wages; and if a farmer was losing money, on making less profits on his farm every year, members of that Federation would not be justified in demanding increased wages and thus increasing their employer's burdens. If the farmer was losing money, and farmers were making good profits, he would say that it would be within their right to approach their employer, and in a fairly behaved manner for their wages to be put up a shilling or so a week. And if he was a reasonable employer he would not refuse an application of that nature; but it would

to go and press for higher wages when the farmer must either place the land under grass or reduce his labour bill. The same law applied to manufacture, for the more money a manufacturer received, the more money the manufacturer received, and the more people he was able to employ. Dealing with the question of sickness, and quoting from the report of the Royal Commission, he said that, say, a workman pointed out the serious effect they had upon trade, and how many a large contract was lost through the workmen being unable to do it. English workman was not prepared to meet his employer on that point, and he thought that was not the worst phase of the question. When once a contract was lost in that way it was not soon recovered. The speaker had in the Norwich Congress that one of the remedies for the present state of affairs was an eight hours day; but angular to say, if they looked at countries where that had been tried to engage those things by other countries that had adopted the system—they found that short hours up to a certain point only were beneficial. As an instance of this the speaker mentioned two large mills, one at Vienna and the other in Switzerland, where formerly 14 and 15 hours a day were respectively worked. Now ten hours a day only were worked and the output had increased. In Switzerland, however, it was found a shortening of the hours of labour; for instance, where the nature of the work was such as to endanger the lives of the public in connection with it, as those employed for a longer period, as in the case of railway signalmen. (Applause.) He would also favour shorter hours in the case of miners, whose risk was great and their work exhaustive, precluded the miners themselves unanimously asked for an eight hours day. In the cotton factories, where great danger prevailed and carelessness created great risk, there also he would be in favour of shortening the hours of labour. But take other trades—even eight hours day would not be beneficial. Take the bricklayers. In summer time they could generally work long hours and in winter time short hours, but when they were bound to work shorter hours and earn less money, and would be fair and just to say to the bricklayer in the winter time, "You should work eight hours and no longer? REFLECTIONS ON THE MICHAELMAS SALES.

[By Our Special Correspondent.]

The harvest is almost forgotten by this time; but, although all the difficulties attending the ingathering of the corn have been overcome, there is, of course, a place, a good deal of discoloration, yet the troubles concerning the disposal of the corn are only just beginning to present themselves in their full force. After all the bother, uncertainty, and disappointment connected with the housing of the corn after it has been produced are as nothing compared with the selling of it. Farmers do not like the price, and the merchants and millers are, to all appearance, masters of the situation. I would not suggest, for the moment, that they are prone to take anything like undue advantage of the eagerness of many agriculturists to sell—an eagerness born of the knowledge that the harvest wages have been heavy, and that there is no other method of the bank with which to meet the rent and other liabilities—but I have met with friends who have come off the market looking very glum, and complaining that the merchants would not look at their sample; meaning, I suppose, at the prices they asked. What I used at one time to be about the pleasantest part of the after harvest business is perhaps just at the present juncture one of the most disagreeable. It is not nice to have to crouch up to the merchant in fear and trembling as it were, to

HAVE THE SAMPLE ABRUPTLY RETURNED

with the significant shake of the head. The great supply of foreign corn puts the English farmer—and the merchant too—at a considerable disadvantage, and this will be more apparent as the

SINGULAR DEATH IN IPSWICH WORKHOUSE.

SAD END OF AN ARMY PENSIONER.

SEVERE STRICTURES BY THE JURY.

James McDermott, aged 49, a pensioner of the 56th Royal Warwickshire Regiment, has died in the Ipswich Union Workhouse under singular circumstance. On Sunday evening Mr. Durkin, superintendent, was directing his removal to the Workhouse Infirmary. Instead of doing so, he sent where the deceased was detained in the receiving ward for another day. The question as to the death of his wife last August, whether nothing was done for him beyond the usual allowance of bread, cheese, and tea, until Monday morning, when Mr. J. R. Staddon ordered his immediate removal to the Infirmary. Then the man made no complaint, but asked to be discharged. He was admitted to the Infirmary at 9 o'clock on Monday, and died at 11 o'clock. The Workhouse Master was closely examined by the Coroner, and he admitted having ignored the order of Mr. Allinson, who, at the time that the deceased was suffering from the effects of drink. The Jury agreed with the Coroner that this was the unfortunate man having been detained for 22 hours in the receiving ward without medical attention, and the Coroner, pending a post-mortem examination by an independent surgeon. The inquest was resumed on Thursday, when Mr. A. F. Vulliamy (clerk to the Guardians) watched the case on behalf of the Master. A

Dr. Cuthbert Cobb described the wasted condition of the deceased, and said he did not sleep all night, and that he was so ill that witness had to cause him to remain with McDermott as he was too ill to leave the Workhouse. He made a post-mortem examination, and discovered died from chronic pneumonia of long standing, both lungs being acutely congested. Persons of that description required medical treatment and careful nursing. The witness would not say that the fact of deceased being kept in a cell could materially have been the cause of removal, but had no doubt about the treatment he received being improper. The Workhouse porter deposed that the man Carr had cautioned him about the deceased except that he was "queer," but he confessed to having departed from the usual practice in this case, because the latter's disease was ill from the effects of drink.—Mr. Vulliamy, on behalf of the Master, admitted that there had been a decided error in judgment, and that he had pleaded that both Master and porter formed similar opinions as to the man's condition, and considered that there was no occasion to shorten his existence if all there was to be done was to keep him warm.

A DERELICTION OF DUTY

on the part of the Workhouse Master, but the Jury was not the friendless and illegal cognizance of it.—The Jury returned a verdict of "Death from natural causes," and added a rider to the effect that the matter came to the notice of the medical officer. Dr. Cobb said he could not state with certainty whether deceased would remain in a ward without artificial heat for 22 hours, without being generally ascertained his condition, or brought him under the notice of the medical officer. While not feeling justified in making the Master responsible for McDermott's death, the Jury were of opinion that the absence of proper treatment had accelerated it. They also expressed the opinion that communication should be made between the telephonic communication should be made between the medical officer and the Workhouse, acknowledged the humane conduct of the police force, and requested that a copy of the presentment be sent to the Ipswich Guardians and the Local Government Board.—The presentment of the Jury was read to the Guardians at their weekly meeting yesterday, Mr. J. B. Fraser observing that it was that could possibly be made to that Board, and one which deserved very careful attention. It would be for the Board to form a hurried judgment, and he suggested that the representations of the Jury be referred to the St. Peter's Workhouse Committee to fully inquire into the matter and report to the Board, so that wherever the blame was the Board could apportion it, and deal with it as the circumstances demanded. He moved a resolution to that effect, which was seconded by Mr. G. Quinton, and unanimously adopted. It was agreed that the Committee should meet at an early date.

IPSWICH C.E.T.S.: ST. MATTHEW'S BRANCH.

The opening entertainment of this Society was held on Thursday at St. Matthew's Schoolroom, the Rev. B. Haslewood presiding. A most enjoyable evening was spent, the following taking part in the programme:—The Misses Palmer, Mr. Stanley Ransome, Mr. Cooper, and Rev. A. H. Hayes.

IPSWICH LYCEUM THEATRE.

Large houses have been the order this week at this Theatre to witness "A Woman of No Importance." The play is of enthralling interest, and we would advise all to secure this their last opportunity to-night (Saturday) to see the piece. Their trouble will be well repaid. Next week R. and S. Gatti's Adelphi success, "The Lights of Home," will be produced. When we mention that the authors of the drama are Messrs. Geo. R. Sims and H. Pettitt, no further guarantee will be required of its likelihood to please.

DISGRACEFUL CONDUCT OF IPSWICH BOYS.

LETTING OFF FIREWORKS IN A HOUSE.

Thomas Holmes (8), Henry Smith (10), William Catchpole (12), and Herbert Hazell (10), all living in Albion Street, were summoned by the Ipswich Police Court on Thursday, for letting off fireworks in the streets.—Susannah Whyman, living in Holy Wells Road, said she had been rained into her house on Fair day dinner time by the front door and placed a number of lighted fireworks under some clothes. The smoke of the crackers caused considerable alarm to a blind old lady sitting in the same room.—Thomas Day, another lad, who was called the defendant's fugleman, corroborated. On the first three, who pleaded not guilty, were each fined 2s. or three days. The other lad, who pleaded guilty, only 1s. or three days.

HARVEST FESTIVAL AT EYE.

The annual harvest festival at Eye Church was commenced on Thursday evening, when a large congregation attended the Evensong service at 7.30, the clergy taking part in the service being the vicar, Rev. A. J. Spencer, the curate, the Rev. W. H. Chambers, and the Rev. T. Bond. The service was choral, and was present in full strength, and in addition to the ordinary harvest hymns, &c., sang as specials music, Keymer's in F flat, and "Nunc Dimittis" in E flat, Stainer's fine anthem "Honour the Lord," in which the baritone solo was sung by Mr. Rush well sung by Mr. H. Woolsey and W. Rush respectively. The preacher was the Rev. Canon Venables, rector of Yaxley, who delivered an able and impressive sermon, from Galatians v., 22 and 23. The handsome sacred edifice was most tastefully adorned with corn, fruit, and flowers, in honour of the festival. At the altar there was a most lovely arrangement of pot plants, including ferns and fine specimens of corn, with a large sheaf of wheat at each end of the table. The prayer-desk, pulpit, lectern, font were all tastefully and beautifully decorated, the whole presenting an appearance which could hardly be surpassed by any in the county. The collection was in behalf of the Eye Hospital, and was a very good one.

IPSWICH NEW WORKHOUSE QUESTION.

WHO IS TO BE THE ARCHITECT?

Yesterday, at the ordinary meeting of the Ipswich Board of Guardians, the Committee appointed to visit various Workhouses, with the view of collecting data to enable the Governors to form an opinion as to how deciding upon the accommodation, &c., to be provided in the new Workhouse, which it is contemplated shall be built on a site near the present site of the Woodbridge Road and Spring Road, presented its report. For a small Workhouse suitable to the requirements of Ipswich, the Committee considered the system of the present day was, on the whole, more satisfactory; but as to the Infirmary accommodation they believed it would be found that the best decision on the matter was made a hundred years ago when, according to the most modern models. The Committee discussed various details, and with their report presented a detailed plan providing for 24 Females and 72 Males in the Workhouse; 112 inmates in the Infirmary, and 35 tramps and ordinary paupers, making a grand total of 223. The Committee also gave the estimated cost, but having drafted a scheme, the next question was who shall be entrusted to carry it out? The Committee considered the system of placing matters entirely in the hands of the architect, entrusted with the plans should be one possessing a special knowledge of this class of work. In this suggestion the Rev. T. Bond fully concurred, remarking that it was unfair to the Ipswich architects, among whom were plenty of men of ability, and capable of carrying out a scheme like the one in question. Mr. Cocks concurred in this view, but Mr. W. O. White thought there was a certain amount of jealousy manifested. Mr. J. B. Fraser, however, assured the Board that after an interview he had had with the Local Government Board, he believed that such a course was necessary to the successful accomplishment of the work.—The report was then formally received, together with the Committee's suggestion about the architect, only two members opposing the resolution.

EXTRAORDINARY AFFAIR AT IPSWICH.

STRUGGLE WITH A MADMAN IN A CHURCH.

SAD STORY OF RELIGIOUS MANIA.

A painful and sensational scene was witnessed in St. Michael's Church, Ipswich, at the conclusion of last Sunday evening's service, and one which has evoked numerous expressions of sympathy for the unfortunate parties concerned. Mr. Franklin, superintendent of the Gresham Life Assurance Society for the Ipswich District, was married about six months ago and went to reside in Belle Vue Road. During the latter part of last week a certain strangeness of demeanour was noticed in Mr. Franklin, who, it has since transpired, was suffering from a religious mania. On Sunday morning, in company with Mrs. Franklin, he attended St. John's Church, and, during the service, was seized with a fit. Having apparently recovered, in the evening Mr. Franklin accompanied his wife to St. Michael's Church, where they stayed for the Communion service, which followed the evening. The Rev. W. J. Garrould, the vicar, observed Mr. Franklin's strange gestures while celebrating the Communion, and the latter manifested a desire to sip out of both the wine cups, and he also showed some reluctance to part with either chalice. Before the benediction Mr. Franklin did not leave the church in conjunction with the rest of the congregation, but stayed behind, and ultimately entered into conversation with the Vicar and Mr. Bevan (churchwarden), while they counted the offertory in the vestry. Mr. Franklin subsequently began to induce her husband to go home, but without avail. Indeed his condition rapidly became serious, and suddenly the poor fellow so far lost his reason that he seized his wife and would, undoubtedly, have strangled her had it not been for the intervention of Mr. Garrould and Mr. Bevan. Realising that they were practically locked up with a madman, Mr. Garrould and Mrs. Franklin immediately sought medical and police assistance; but in the meantime a violent struggle ensued between Mr. Bevan and the unfortunate lunatic. When Dr. Edwards arrived on the scene he confirmed the opinion that Mr. Franklin was suffering from religious mania. A cab was obtained, and by arrangement with Dr. Cosley, the poor victim was driven to the County Asylum, where he was admitted about midnight, the parties mentioned having had to struggle with him, more or less, for a period of three hours. Latest reports state that Mr. Franklin's condition is most critical.

NEW PARISH ROOM FOR WESTERFIELD.

The new parish room for Westerfield, which the Rev. R. H. Cantley, the popular rector, has for some time been endeavouring to secure, was opened on Thursday evening, when the Rev. W. Berry, rector of St. Peter's, Ipswich, delivered a suitable address.

HARD SWEARING AT BUNGAY.

At the Bungay Petty Sessions on Wednesday, an affiliation order was made upon George Hunter, of Mautby, on the application of Elizabeth Pickard, of Mautby, the application of Elizabeth Pickard, of Mautby, the application being for 2s. 6d. per week. There was some hard swearing, the defendant, who had paid £1 17s. 6d. on account, now denying all knowledge of the matter. The Bench said it was a case for the Treasury to take up.

SOUTHWOLD GAS COMPANY'S ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Southwold Gas Company was held in the Town Hall, on Monday last, when Mr. J. E. Grubbe presided. The report showed an increase, especially on residuals, and after carrying forward a substantial sum to the "reserve fund," a dividend of 5 per cent. was declared. Mr. W. Crimmen and Mr. Eaton W. Moore were re-elected directors.

AN INFANT'S EXTRAORDINARY DEATH.

SUFFOCATED BY A CHAIR.

Clara Webb, of 6, Warwick Place, S.W., left her baby in bed asleep, but took the precaution of placing the backs of two chairs against the side of the bed to prevent him falling out. Upon her return, after an absence of an hour and a quarter, she found him suffocated, lying across the bed with his head between the two rails of one of the chairs and his face resting upon the leather seat. At the inquest on Wednesday the Coroner remarked that it was one of the most extraordinary cases he had ever investigated, and the jury returned a verdict of "Accidental death."

BLYTHING UNION BOARD OF GUARDIANS.

This Authority met at the Union House, Bulcamp, on Thursday, when the following tenders were accepted:—Flour, for the House, 15s. per sack, Mr. Kett; 1st district, 15s., Mr. Kett; 2nd district, 15s. 6d., Mr. Chambers; 3rd district, 15s., Mr. Kett; beef, 6d. to 6½d., mutton 7d., 8½d. to 9d., Mr. Jas. Fryett; clothing, Mr. Farrow, Bungay; drapery, Mr. Farrow; cheese, Mr. Farrow; brushes, Mr. Farrow; grocery, Mr. Farrow; stationery and printing, Mr. Gale. The value of open competition is shown by the prices of some articles now supplied as compared with a time not long since, when only one tender was submitted; a careful review shows a reduction of 50 per cent. and in a few cases more than that.

STRADBROKE PETTY SESSIONS.

At the Stradbroke Petty Sessions, before the Rev. H. S. Marriott (chairman), Rev. F. French, and the Rev. Canon Tate, Harriett Knowles, wife of John Knowles, labourer, Medfield, was charged by Jemima, the wife of Frederick Hunter, Medfield, with an assault, on September 29th. Defendant pleaded not guilty, and after hearing the evidence, the Bench dismissed the case, complainant to pay 8s.—Charles Chambers, labourer, Wilby, charged by Alice Roberts, single woman, of the same place, with beating her on September 19-h, pleaded not guilty, but the Bench considered the case proved, and fined him 10s. consideration the age of the lad, and there being nothing previous against him, dealt leniently by imposing a fine of 5s. only. Costs 10s. 6d. also allowed. The Rev. F. French took the chair during the hearing of this case.

DEATH OF A NORFOLK J.P.

A VENERABLE RESIDENT OF DISS.

On Thursday the inhabitants of Diss and neighbourhood learnt, with deep regret, of the death of one of their most respected and venerable neighbours, in the person of Mr. William Charles Nurse, J.P. for Norfolk, and was married in 1838 to Frances Elizabeth, daughter of the late Rev. William Manning, of Diss, Mr. Carlotis was educated at Shrewsbury and Trinity Hall, Cambridge (LL. B. 1831, LL. D. 1836); he was admitted an advocate in Doctors' Commons in the latter year, and on becoming connected with Diss was placed on the Commission of the Peace for Norfolk.

LIFE IN THE HOPFIELDS.

SLEEPING IN TATTERED TENTS.

At an inquest at Lambeth on Wednesday a pitiable story of hopping life was told. The inquiry was into the death of the baby of Catherine Dean, of 5, Eden Street, New Cut. The mother, a weakly-looking woman, said that on September 5th she took her baby and five other children to Burton Farm, Paddock Wood, for the hop-picking. For a fortnight the baby kept in good health, but on Saturday week it was found to be suffering from a cold on the chest. On Thursday before the baby got wringing wet in the tent where seven persons were sleeping. It was an old tent and the canvas was full of holes. It rained all night and the sleepers got wet through. The bed was made with two trusses of straw. She had complained to the people at the farm of the wetness of her tent, but of her complaint. Death was shown to be due to bronchial pneumonia, and the jury, in returning a verdict of death by misadventure, were of opinion that the proprietors of the tent were much to blame for not having repaired it. The Coroner said he would write to the owner.

ROBBED DURING HOLY COMMUNION.

A DARING LONDON THIEF.

A daring and impudent robbery is reported to have been committed by a man named John Stevens, aged 44, well dressed, and describing himself as a servant, of no address, who appeared at the Marylebone Police Court on Wednesday. Miss Edith Johnson, of 12a, Hyde Park Mansions, attended the mid-day service at Christ Church, Marylebone, left her purse, books, etc. on the book-rest in the pew in which she had been seated while she went up to the altar to partake of the Holy Communion. When she returned to the pew her purse was gone. While the service was in progress, the Rev. George F. Chester noticed a prisoner enter the church, and creep along one of the aisles in a stooping position until he reached the pew where the prosecutrix had been sitting. He took something, and at once made for the exit door. Leaving the altar the rev. gentleman went after the man, who was stopped in the street by a constable, to whom he delivered up the purse. Prisoner was in September of last year convicted of robberies at three different churches. Mr. Cooke committed him for trial.

STOWMARKET AMATEUR DRAMATIC SOCIETY.

It is many years since the Stowmarket Amateur Dramatic Society gave a performance. On Thursday and Friday evenings the Institute Hall was well filled by two performances of "The Coming Woman," and "My Lord in Livery," the entertainments being given in aid of the Band Society's funds. Both pieces afforded a very enjoyable evening, and the acting was distinctly good. Mr. Bridges, Baker, and Death. The first piece presented was "The Coming Woman," the chief characters being taken by Capt. Norman as Tom Carbery, and Miss Walker as Victorine. Miss Hayward, as a woman of advanced views, proved herself a natural actress, and Mr. Gerard Ridley personated the henpecked husband, and his management of the baby was highly entertaining. In "My Lord in Livery," Capt. Norman as Spiggott and Mr. Porter as Hopkins created some mirth. Mr. Percy Hayward was also seen to advantage as the amateur burglar. Miss Walker is due to be complimented on her rendering of Sybil. Mr. C. C. Tuck as stage manager, and his fellow workers, are to be congratulated on the effective scenery and stage arrangements. The Hall was crowded, so that the entertainment should prove a financial success.

PLATFORM ACCIDENT AT PLYMOUTH

SCORES OF PEOPLE BURIED IN THE DEBRIS.

Mr. T. Owen, M.P., attended on Wednesday a luncheon held at Plymouth in connection with the laying of a memorial stone of a new Wesleyan Sunday School. While a large audience was awaiting the commencement of the proceedings in the open air, a portion of one of the chief platforms collapsed, carrying scores of persons with it, many of whom, after falling a depth of 20ft., were buried under a mass of masonry and broken timber. Over a dozen persons were injured, some badly; and it is feared that one or two cases will terminate fatally.

The following among other East Suffolk schools have obtained First Classes in the various competitions under the sewing scheme. The prize winners are included with these:—Rushmere St. Andrew's, Grundisburgh (Girls), Pakenham (B), Rattlesden, Kessingland, Beach, Holton, Bradwell, Hasketon, Framsingfield, Aldeburgh, Framlingham, Leiston, Trimley, Benhall (B), Beccles (B), Dunwich, Theberton, Badingham, Horham, Knodishall, Worlingham, Martlesham, Kirkley, Stradishall, Pakefield, Wickham Market, Kelsale, Lanford, Saxtorley, Lowestoft St. John's, Lowestoft St. Margaret (Central), Bramfield, Bedingfield, Gisleham, Ashby, Repps, Halesworth, Southwold, Reedlesham, Walton (B).

UNDER THE HAMMER.

LOWESTOFT.

On Thursday, at Lowestoft Public Hall, Mr. W. T. Balls offered several lots of property for competition. Only one, however, was sold, a house and premises, No. 3, St. John's Road, which was purchased by Mr. Simnett for £170.

WOODBRIDGE.

On Thursday afternoon Mr. H. W. Collins sold by auction, at the Bull Hotel, Woodbridge, the undermentioned property by direction of the executors of Mr. Thomas Bedwell, deceased:—Messuage, with large garden, near the chapel, Hollesley, Miss E. Cobham, Walton, £100 10s. Double corner cottage, adjoining. Miss E. Cobham, £42 10s. Double cottage, with 2a. 0r. 16p. of arable and garden ground, and two small cottages in Shottisham, Mr. E. A. Kemp, Shottisham, £225.

DEATH OF AN IPSWICH MASTER MARINER.

James Avis, master mariner, passed away on Friday, August 10th, at Kiama Hospital, after a long illness. He was for 40 years identified with the Shoalhaven River district, and for a long time (in the seventies) was employed by the Illawarra Steam Navigation Company as master of river steamers. He was for a long time master of the steamer Coolangatta which was washed out to sea from Terrara and wrecked in the flood of 20th February, 1870. The deceased was a native of Walton, near Ipswich, Suffolk (England). He was 70 years of age at the time of his death, and leaves a wife and four children, two of whom were present at his funeral, which took place on Sunday afternoon last, his remains being brought over from Kiama and interred at Nowra public cemetery.

SUNDAY SCHOOL UNION AT DEBENHAM.

The annual meeting of the Suffolk Sunday School Union was held at Debenham Chapel, on Wednesday, under the presidency of the Rev. T. Devine, Debenham. The afternoon meeting was mainly taken up with the reading of superintendents' and visitors' reports from the following schools:—Debenham, Otley, Earl Soham, Framsden, Brandeston, Wickham Market, Grundisburgh, Whitehouse, and Tunstall, and the election of officers for the ensuing year. Mr. R. Lambert, of Framlingham, was elected president for 1895, and Mr. G. Rowe, of Framden, vice-president. An excellent tea was provided by Mrs. C. Wythe, of which about seventy partook. At the evening meeting there was a good attendance. The president's address was on "Obligations of Sunday School Teachers." An address was given by the Rev. W. Tooke, of Grundisburgh. Prizes were given to the scholars and teachers who had been successful in the Scripture examinations. The meeting was of a most enjoyable character, being among the best the Union has ever had.

NOVEL FORM OF ANNOYANCE.

"SHADOWING" A CURATE.

Before the Croydon Magistrates on Wednesday, Frances Anne Goldfinch, a young lady of 30, whose father occupies a prominent position at Faversham, Kent, appeared to further answer a charge of wilfully annoying the Rev. Thomas Gibson Hill, B.A., one of the curates of St. Peter's parish church, by persistently ringing his bell and knocking at his door. At the hearing last week it was stated that the defendant continuously annoyed Mr. Hill for a long time past by "shadowing" him, and that she had pestered him with letters, both abusive and silly. The case had been adjourned to enable her to leave the neighbourhood, which she had somewhat reluctantly undertaken to do; but it was stated that she had been unable to find a lodging. The Mayor told the defendant this persistent annoyance could not possibly go on. She would be fined 20s. and 2s. 6d. costs, or in default go to prison for 21 days, and would be allowed a week in which to pay. Defendant hurriedly left the Court, waving her fan as though she had held in her hand.

PRESENTATION AT THE COLONIAL COLLEGE.

On Monday last Mr. J. Welton, head gardener, was the recipient of a handsome silver service, consisting of teapot, sugar basin, and cream jug, presented to him by the members of the College. The presentation took place in the smoking-room, in the presence of the students, Mr. Welton and his family, on the room was greeted by rounds of applause.—Mr. F. Hocking, for whom the presentation was entrusted, in a few well-chosen remarks, made the presence of the very pretty silver service on the table before him, the gift of the members of the College, as a mark of the high esteem in which he was held by them, and for the deep interest he took in them as instructor to them in gardening. On the teapot were inscribed the words—"Presented to John Welton by the members of the Colonial College, in appreciation of his services." The recipient suitably replied, and Mr. Pilgrim, on behalf of the members, thanked Mr. Heatly for the interest he had shown in getting the presentation up. Mr. Heatly assured them that it was a great pleasure to him, as no person deserved a testimonial more than J. Welton.

NEW LIFEBOAT FOR DUNWICH.

NOVEL SCENE AT DARSHAM.

The time allowed generally, without extraordinary circumstance intervene, for lifeboats is 20 years, hence we find that the Dunwich lifeboat is being changed, and the old "Ann Furgeson" being superplanted by the "Lily Bird." Could the inhabitants of Dunwich, when Dunwich was the principal sea-port city on the coast of England, wake up, they would wonder the astonishment at the loss of their city, and next at the curious (to them) invention for saving life at sea. The old boat was taken to Darsham station on Friday last week, and with the new one brought to the beach by a team of five splendid horses. At one o'clock the first signal was fired, the lifeboat and her crew proceeded by the Coastguard at Dunwich and Misner, responding. Amidst hearty cheers the "Lily Bird" took her first baste of the briny. Unfortunately the occasion was not without an accident, both of the coxswains' hats fell into the sea, and then the boat was capsized by some of the hooks slipping. The crew were afterwards entertained by Mrs. Green, of the Barne Arms.

RIFLE MATCH AT EYE.

A friendly rifle match between past and present members of the Eye Company of Volunteers took place at the Eye range on Thursday, and resulted in a victory for the present members by 11 points. The following were the scores:—Present: Prvt. G. Gills, Prvt. J. Slammers, Corpl. Kerry, Sergt. C. Reeves, Sergt. F. Gill, Sergt. J. Nunn, Prvt. A. Fairweather, Prvt. A. Burrows, Prvt. T. Tricker, Sergt. C. Harper, Sergt. C. Gedny, Sergt. Bailey, Prvt. J. Osborn, Sergt.-Lieut. Wright; total 426. Past: Mr. G. A. Onyon, Mr. J. Edwards, Mr. J. Manning, Mr. Hayward, Mr. W. Hammond, Mr. W. Hammond, Mr. W. H. Gedny, Mr. C. H. Scrivener, Mr. B. O. Gedny, Mr. Chas. Gedny, Mr. Wilson, left hand purse, books, etc. on the book-rest in the pew in which she had been seated while she went up to the altar to partake of the Holy Communion. When she returned to the pew her purse was gone. While the service was in progress, the Rev. George F. Chester noticed a prisoner enter the church, and creep along one of the aisles in a stooping position until he reached the pew where the prosecutrix had been sitting. EXTRAORDINARY AFFAIR AT YARMOUTH.

A CREW REFUSE TO STAY IN A STEAMER.

The iron paddle steamer Aquila, flying the Peruvian flag, has been towed into Yarmouth harbour, owing to her crew refusing to work the ship. The Aquila left Leith a few days since, bound for Para, in Peru, where she was intended to perform a local passenger service on the rivers. The behaviour of the steamer while working down the east coast was unabominable to ship other seamen in their place. The Aquila is a perfectly new vessel, specially constructed at Leith for the traffic referred to.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

DUKE OF HAMILTON'S YACHT IN IPSWICH DOCK.—The steam yacht Thistle, with the Duke of Hamilton on board, arrived in dock on Thursday afternoon from Bergen, after a fire weeks' cruise in Scotland and Norway. It is expected the Thistle will leave in a few days for Cowes, where she will probably lay up for the winter.

IPSWICH ORIENT SWIMMING CLUB "SMOKER."—The members of this club, on Wednesday evening, held an enjoyable smoking concert at the Great White Horse Hotel, Ipswich. The programme was contributed to by the following:—Messrs. Rash (chairman) and Lowe (pianoforte soloist and accompanist), W. J. Manning, A. W. Jex, T. W. Osborne, W. G. Exton, Harry G. Glendenning, A. Jeffries, and J. Bruce. At the conclusion Mr. R. D. Fraser saked the company to drink the health of the chairman (Rev. A. Barrington). The Mayor's health was then cordially drunk, and the proceedings terminated with the National Anthem.

ST. MARGARET'S, IPSWICH, Y.M.S.—The opening of the winter session of this aspiring Society took place on Thursday. It was a most pleasant and all through the interest was well maintained. With varied programme the evening quickly passed, and the applause showed the pleasure of the audience. The ladies most willingly replied when re-called, and the genial Chairman (Rev. C. B. Nash) had easy work in moving thanks to the performers. With a "taking" fixture card and several new members added, we consider the Tuesday nights for this session will be much looked forward to by the members. Programme:—Solo, Miss Moore; song, Mrs. and Miss Gower; recitation, "Joe of the Cottage," Mr. Hingley; song, Miss Moore; reading, "Eulrecque," Mr. Grimwade (secretary); song, "Sailing," Rev. C. B. Nash; recitation, "Uncle Peter's Purchase," Mr. Hingley; song, Mr. Baker (encored), "When the Tide comes in," Miss Mildred Cowell; song (encored), Mrs. Gower; song, "Hearts of Oak," Mr. Mumford; song, "Hunting," Rev. C. B. Nash."

HARVEST THANKSGIVING SERVICES AT SWILLAND were held on Friday evening, the eve of the festival of St. Michael and All Angels, when there was full choral evensong at 8 p.m. The church was crowded, and the Rev. Dr. Cross, of St. Michael's, Lewes, preached an appropriate sermon. The Holy Communion was administered next morning at 8 a.m., and also on Sunday at 11 a.m. and 6.30 p.m. There was a choral service of Matins and Litany, with a sermon preached by the Rev. Dr. Cross, on Monday morning, and afterwards tea was provided by Mrs. C. Wythe, of which about seventy partook. At the evening meeting there was a good attendance. The president's address was on "Obligations of Sunday School Teachers." An address was given by the Rev. W. Tooke, of Grundisburgh. Prizes were given to the scholars and teachers who had been successful in the Scripture examinations. The meeting was of a most enjoyable character, being among the best the Union has ever had.

HARVEST THANKSGIVING SERVICES AT THORNDON were held in the parish church on Sunday. The sacred edifice was very prettily decorated, and the corn, flowers, fruit and vegetables kindly sent by several of the parishioners, were artistically arranged as follows:—Altar rails, Mrs. Reynolds and Miss C. Clayton; pulpit, Mrs. G. Hayward; lamp, Miss Ada Hammond; reading-desk, Mrs. F. Clarke and Miss Pratt; lectern, Miss Annie Hammond; windows, Miss Mary Hotwright and friend; baptism, Misses D. Brewster, D. Holley, A. Noller, Ada Wilding, Emily Everson, and M. Turner. Both morning and evening services opened with the hymn 382. The Rev. S. B. Reynolds, rector of the parish, officiated at the morning service and preached an appropriate sermon to a large congregation. Text being taken from Jeremiah v., 25 and 26, also Habakkuk iii., 17 and 18. In the evening the Rev. T. Holt Wilson, rector of Redgrave, and rural dean, read the second lesson and preached a splendid sermon to a crowded congregation, the text being taken from St. Paul's Epistle to the Philippians iv., 11, 13, and 19. The musical portions of the service were well rendered by members. The recipient, on entering the room, was greeted by rounds of applause.—Mr. F. Hocking, for whom the presentation was entrusted, in a few well-chosen remarks, made the presence of the very pretty silver service on the table before him, the gift of the members of the College, as a mark of the high esteem in which he was held by them, and for the deep interest he took in them as instructor to them in gardening. On the teapot were inscribed the words—"Presented to John Welton by the members of the Colonial College, in appreciation of his services." The recipient suitably replied, and Mr. Pilgrim, on behalf of the members, thanked Mr. Heatly for the interest he had shown in getting the presentation up. Mr. Heatly assured them that it was a great pleasure to him, as no person deserved a testimonial more than J. Welton.
